The screenshot shows a mobile phone interface with a blue header bar containing icons for signal strength, battery level (29%), and time (8:46 PM). The main content area has a white background with a large blue arrow pointing left at the top. Below the arrow, the title "Terms of Use" is displayed in bold black font. A smaller box with a white background contains the heading "Terms of Use" in bold black font, followed by a detailed paragraph about the company's mission and publishing philosophy. At the bottom of this box, there is another paragraph of text.

At Text we want to publish books that make a difference to people's lives. We believe that reading should be a marvellous experience, that every book you read should somehow change your life if only by a fraction. We love the phrase 'lost in a book'—that's where we want our readers to be. You can't We care passionately about the quality of our editorial work. Design and production matter to us because we want our books to be beautiful objects. And since we want our beautiful books to be read on trains and beaches, in beds and planes, or under the desk at school and work, we work up a sweat to promote and market them. And that includes selling rights on behalf of our writers to publishers all around the world. In fact we earn more money for our writers through licensing international editions than we do by turning their books into bestsellers in Australia and New Zealand.
